

TREE CONCEPT

Authored by
TIM LEMMENS

A small, solar-powered device that lets an oak speak in its own slow, grumpy voice—sharing only what it senses in the park.

WHAT IS IT?

- A grumpy oak that speaks—inviting visitors to slow down, listen, and care for this place; gently nudging better park etiquette and less litter.
- A small voice for the park—nudging better etiquette, fostering moments of pause, and supporting community stewardship.
- Cleaner, quieter visits: gentle prompts to use bins and keep voices low in sensitive areas.
- Respect & learning: protect trees (no carving—bark is living tissue) and spark kid-friendly nature tasks to build literacy.
